- American Sign Language (ASL) interpretations at select performances. For theatregoers who use ASL as their primary means of communication, we will provide a team of experienced theatre interpreters who stand to the side of the stage and translate what the actors are saying or singing into ASL in both theatres. Specific seats are allocated so that the theatre-goer can read the signers interpretation clearly.
- Audio Description offered to visually impaired theatregoers at select performances in the main stage. Patrons utilize a small hand-held receiver with one earpiece, leaving the opposite ear available to hear the dialogue and action occurring on stage. An audio describer occasionally speaks “between the lines” to describe entrances, exits, actions, and key props to people who cannot see them. In addition, before the show and during intermission, the describer “sets up” for the performance by detailing the stage layout, props, characters, and costumes.
